2006 Classic

THEY came to Albany in their thousands to watch a record number of participants take part in the weekend's 2006 Albany & Great Southern Weekender Classic Motor Event.

The event through the streets of the central business district proved to be one of the most popular since round-the-houses racing started 70 years ago.

An estimated crowd of more than 15,000 packed the streets to watch the vintage and classic cars compete in their own personal race against the clock.

While trying to beat set times, some drivers and their cars "kissed" the concrete barriers erected overnight by hundreds of volunteers, who returned after the event was over to ensure Albany's streets were back to normal.
